

e-TAX FILING - Q&A

- Should the bid contain offer for the hosting of hardware and software?

Hosting of the software application is responsibility of the PRO.

- Should the bidder generate any tax-filing forms (using form designer) or this will solely be responsibility of the PRO Administrators?

The bid should contain offer for dynamic form designer software as part of the application, while the form design will be generated afterwards in cooperation with the PRO Administrators.

- [Page 6 Paragraph 10 from the System Description Document] - "The system should allow the designing of surveys that can help PRO collect information from taxpayers regarding usage of the system" - are these surveys planned to be used the same way as the tax-submission forms? Should the access to these surveys be public or protected and are there any other ways of survey distribution considered?

The surveys will be generated and submitted the same way as tax-forms, while the publication of the results will be decision of the PRO only.

- Should the license for the antivirus software be included in the offer?

The antivirus software, firewalls or any other additional software should not be included in the proposal, they are responsibility of the PRO.

- [Page 9 Paragraph 4 from the System Description Document] - Regarding to requirement: "The e-Tax services system must be able to interact with existing applications within the Public Revenue Office and exchange data in XML format", since the provided solution will have to interact with already running applications into PRO, it is necessary for us to gain more information about these systems and their APIs in order to provide accurate estimations.

Since the application will run as independent one, will not at this point interact with running application since the DB and other SW is in process of development, it is sufficient to know that the data should be exchanged in XML format.

- What are the terms for using third-party components?

The transfer of any Intellectual Property Rights for software application or elements of the software application does not include the transfer of any third-party development tools and development components license.
